SEVERE CHARGES. They Are Made by Mrs. Nicolaides in

Her Suit for Divorce. SHE TELLS A STORY OF BEATINGS AND CRUEL TREATMENT-CRARGES WHICH INCLUDE TWO OTHER WOMEN MENTIONED AND OTHERS IN

Mrs. Louise Nicolaides today, by her bill for a divorce against Kimon Nicolaides, filed by Mr. J. J. Johnson, gives her version of the family troubles. She, in a narrative form, sets out that her maiden name was McLaughlin and they were married by Rev. Father John McNamara at St. Peter's Church, Saratoga Springs, N. Y., October 18, 1882, and immediately went to New York, living in a furnished room and taking meals at a restaurant; that defendant went into the employment of Marinuna Bros., a Japanese house, as a clerk, n which he continued till the following spring. she states that she was anxious that he go in ousiness for himself, and by her father going his security he was enabled to open a little store at Saratoga Springs.

After reciting that he kept a store in New Haven as well as Saratoga, she states that they came here and opened business at 1106 F street, living in rooms on 13th street and going to Saratoga in the summer. HE WENT OUT.

When they returned to Washington she states that she was unable to attend the business and they had a clerk, Rosa Reeder, who she had taught the business. She states that defendant was so persistent in his attentions to this clerk that she spoke to him about it, and on October 10. 1891, when she was about being sick, she asked him not to go out, but he did go, as he said, to the theater, and when, after he returned, a doctor came he persisted in leaving her. Miss Reeder, she states, did not encourage his attentions and she, seeing the trouble resulting, refused to remain in the store. This led to a quarrel, in which de-fendant struck her, knocked her down and put his knees on her arms. On one occasion, she states, when he was abusing her Dr. Walter came in and said she had gone through enough and if the excitement continued it would drive her insane.

The night he struck her, she states, a Mrs. Price was in the crowd and advised that she be

Mrs. and soon was convinced that it was an insane asylum. After describing her experience she states that Mr. Nicolaides came to see her, but she sent word that if he liked he could get a room upstairs and see how he would like it for a while. A week after he brought her back from Mt. Hope. When she returned home she says she asked him if he had seen Rosa, and he answered that he had simply seen her at the door and she knew that he had been her at the door and she knew that he had been

A policeman came up, and she said: "You can arrest me; that is all he wants." The defendant then had her arrested, and her father

She states that she returned when she found he had a girl named Blanche Auderson in his states that she worked in the store, did the cooking and sewing for the children, and at 4:30 o'clock left the defendant and Blanche in the store, and had caught them more than once in a peculiar and shameful position, once kissing good-night, and she told him that she must leave. Then a quarrel ensued and he wanted her to get a divorce, but she, not wantwould sue for a divorce on the ground of in-sanity and bad temper. After Christmas, in 1893, defendant told her father that they had arranged for a separation, and she begged de-keeping company with one Cleo at Madam Sinclare's, on 13th street, and on one occasion he said to her if the store was closed he would have Cleo, and she describes the scene of March 17 last, when he threw her on the floor and after she got up she broke the glass show case, &c. After her father came they tried to agree on a separation, when defendant wanted her father to pay $3,000 for the damage to the store, and on March 22 she left with her father, but after he had writ.

AN ARMY OFFICER'S VIEWS.

An army officer said today that the War Department had no more right to interfere with Mrs. Nicolaides says she told her not to come there again and the woman struck her between until a man rushed in from the street.

She charges that on May 22 he drove the servants away, directed her to pack her trunks and leave; that defendant and Cleo committed adultery in the store on Sunday nights while she was away; that on July 4, 1892, he con-mitted adultery with Blanche Anderson; also adultery with other women in the spring of 1892. special Disputch to The Evening Star Baltimore, MD., June 1.—The Maryland diocesan convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church spent its entire morning session today in discussing the proposition of constituting the standing committee of the dio cese equally of clergymen and laymen. The stending committee is the most important agency of the diocesan convention, for which

In the Maryland diocese, as well as in that of Easton, which was formerly part of Maryland, and in the diocese of Connecticut, the standing committee is composed entirely of clergymen. This is the only standing committee in the Protestant Episcopal Church on which the laity is not represented. The discussion came up on the majority and minority reports which were presented yesterday.

FIGHTING FOR A CHAMPIONSHIP

Andy Bowen Defeats Jack Everhardt, the Light Weight. New OBLEANS, La., June 1.-Andy Bowen and Jack Everhardt met last night before the Olympic Club to contend for the long-disputed claim for the light-weight championship of the south and a purse of $2,000. Considerable interest was taken in the mill, as both men are local favorites. Bowen's record as a pugifist is well known. Everhardt has a fear-ful two-hand blow. He is taller than Bowen and longer in reach and as large as any 133 pound man as ever stepped into the ring. At 1 a.m. the men had fought fifty-six rounds. Bowen showed the greater science and had plenty of speed and strength left and looked like a winner.

Bowen won in the eighty-sixth round. MR. CHAMBERLAIN'S PERIL

The "Old Kentucky Home" at the world's fair grounds was dedicated today. It is the blue grass state building and one of the most attractive in the "white city," and all visitors who go there will be given a welcome such as only Kentuckians know how to extend.

A large number of Kentucky citizens were present, including Gov. John Young Brown and many representatives of the State Fress Association. Mr. W. H. Dulaney of the state board of commissioners tendered the building to the state, Gov. Brown making the response.
